ABOUT THE CHELTENHAM CEMETERIES

Opened on 3 October 1864, the Cheltenham Pioneer Cemetery was the first general cemetery established in Melbourne's bayside and coincided with the demise of the Beaumaris Methodist Churchyard Cemetery (1855-65).

Originally named the Mordialloc and South Moorabbin General Cemetery, eight acres of land fronting Charman Road was reserved. Initially just half of the area was used. A portion of the Cemetery was later excised in the 1880s for the railway line to Mordialloc.

On 14 February 1933, the Cheltenham Memorial Park opened in Holloway (Wangara) Road with 21.9 acres, later extended to 40 acres over a number of stages between the 1940s and '80s. Land was set aside for a crematorium which was never built. The first interment occurred on 27 March with the burial of Mary Ellen Payne. There have since been over 55,000 interments.

Both the Cheltenham Pioneer Cemetery and Cheltenham Memorial Park are the final resting places of many local pioneers and identities and are places of local, state and national importance.

NOTABLE INTERMENTS

Many famous and infamous persons lie buried at the Cheltenham cemeteries. Amongst some of the notable burials are:

William Calder—Chairman of the Country Roads Board.

Ron Casey—Television and sporting personality.

Bill Williamson—Champion jockey.

Sir George Jones—Chief of Air Staff and WWI fighter ace.

Mary Hardy—Stage, television and radio entertainer.

Frank Benvenuto—Victim of the gangland wars.

Sir William Fry—Local identity, soldier and politician.

Clarice Marjoribanks Beckett—Artist.

James Legge—Commander of the AIF during WWI.

Trevor Barker—Champion Australian rules footballer.

Sir Matthew Davies—Notorious land boomer.

Vera Scantlebury Brown—Pioneer of infant welfare.

Leo 'Lucky' Grills—Actor and comedian.

“RESEARCH, RESTORE, REMEMBER”

Formed in May 2007, the Friends of Cheltenham and Regional Cemeteries Inc. is a not-for-profit community group which aims to raise the profile of the Cheltenham cemeteries. Our motto is “research, restore, remember”. We do this by:

- Researching the lives of those interred and sharing this information for the benefit of future generations
- Restoring gravesites by raising funds through close links with interested parties and other stakeholders
- Remembering the contribution of those from our past by running regular walking tours.

Need help searching for a gravesite...? Then why not submit your research request on our website? The service is designed to assist the public who are seeking an extract from the register, a map showing the location and photo of the gravesite. Requests can be submitted via our website <http://focrc.org/locategrave>.

Make a lasting contribution today...We believe that every life is unique and worth remembering. By taking the time to share with us information you will make a lasting contribution for future generations.

DID YOU KNOW? ➤ There are two indigenous Australians buried within the cemeteries? ➤ Land was excised at one of the cemeteries to make way for a railway line? ➤ Victims of some of the biggest crimes and tragic stories are interred within the burial grounds, including the Caulfield Railway disaster (1926), the Westgate Bridge collapse (1970) and the Hoddle and Queen Street massacres (1987)? ➤ The oldest recorded death dates back to 1852? ➤
